No business man in any town should allow a newspaper published in his town to go without his name and business being mentioned somewhere in its col-ums, says an exchange. This applies to all kinds of business general stores, dry goods, gro-cers, funiture dealers, manucers, funiture dealers, mana-facturing establishments, auto-mobile dealers, mechanics, pro-fessional men and in fact all classes of business men. This does not mean that you should have a whole or half or even a a quarter of a page ad. in every issue of the paper, but your name and business should be mentioned if you do not use more than a two-line space. A stranger picking up a news-paper should be able to tell just what business is represented in a town by looking at the business mentioned in the paper. This is the best possible town advertiser. The man who does not advertise his business does an injustice to himself and his town. He is the man who expects the newspaper to do the most free boasting for his town. The man who insists on sharing the business that comes to a town but refuses to advertise his business is not a valuable addition to any town. The life of any town depends upon the live wide-awake and liberal advertising business men.

A footman, bringing in Vane's portmanteau, aroused him, and with a sigh he turned from the window, his wash, and went down.

Julian was waiting for him in the hall; and Vane, throwing off his gloom, led him to the dining room, a stately apartment large enough to be called a banqueting hall.

Vane motioned Julian to the bottom of the table and Mr. Holland to the side, and Prance and a couple of footman served the lunch. Mr. Holland was still all a-quiver pleasant excitement.

"I hope your lordship--and Mr. Julian-are intending a long stay?" he said. "I noticed that you did not bring much luggage .-

Vane shrugged his shoulders. "Oh, thank you, Mr. Holland!" he said. "I don't think we know; a few days, perhaps-

Mr. Holland's face fell.
"Oh, I hope longer than that, Lord Lesborough!" he said, earnestly. "Everybody is expecting-hoping that you are going to settle down at the Court; in fact, I happen to know that some—er—preparations, something in the way of welcoming your lordship-

Vane turned off his dismay with a laugh.

'Ought to settle down, eh, Mr. Holland?" he said. "Well, we'll

"You have been traveling so much, been abroad so long," suggested Mr. Holland, as if eager to make excuses for him, "you find it rather hard to settle down. Of course we've all heard of the wreck-"

"Yes, yes; bad business being wrecked. Prance, is this the wonderful claret? It's like yours, not a bit better, anyway, Julian."

"It's the same," said Julian, nodding across his glass.

Lord Fanworthy desired me to let him know when you arrived, Lord Lesborough," said Mr. Holland.

Vane nodded. "Lord Fanworthy, of the Grange," he explained to Julian. "Our nearest neighbor. He used to be kind to me; I liked him. We'll go over and see him, eh? fact, there'll be a lot of visiting both ways, won't there, Mr. Holland?"

Mr. Holland nodded cheerfully. "Yes, yes; certainly, my lord. Everybody is delighted to hear that you are—er—home; the Lisles—''

"Place called the Moat," said Vane to Julian.

"And the Denningtons-"

"Forget the name of their house," remarked Vane.

"Limmington," supplied Mr. Hol-

"Ah, yes, Limmington, And there are the Chases, and the Protheroes. Plenty of society for you, Julian."

Mr. Holland looked slightly puzz-led. It was as if his lordship and his cousin had things in common; his ily portraits, on the oak panelled walls.

"Fine hall, eh?" said Vane. Julian nodded.

"A bit-stagey, theatrical, isn't it? But I suppose it's because they put this thing on the stage so well. Portrait of our uncle. Poor chap! led'a devilish solitary life, I'm afraid I wish he'd married—"

Julian glanced sideways at him. at first incredulously and with suspicion, then with genuine surprise.

"There's a fellow who's awfully like you, Julian," Vane went on. "Wonderful how features perpetuate themselves. That gentleman in the armor and a helmet which appears to be two sizes too large for him was our great fighting ancestor, Sir Rupert-the peeringe didn't come until after his time; we got it, I fancy, for political services crossed from one side of the House to the other; ratted, in other words. Or was it because the monarch of that period took a fancy to a then Lady Mannering? I forget; but you'll find it in the County History in the library. We'll go there presently. Come into the drawing-room. Prance and Mrs. Field like to call it 'the state apartments.' We used to entertain royalty, you know."

Julian's face flushed, in fact he was in a glow all over, as he surveyed the magnificent suite of rooms which terminated in a conservatory large enough to be called a palm-house.

"It is superb," he said, and he stole a glance at Vane's calm and rather indifferent countenance. "You ought to be a proud man, Vane!"
"Eh?" said Vane. "Oh, ah, y

Vane. "Oh, ah, yes! Yes; it's a fine place; but-but-it's. rather inconveniently large, isn't it? Fancy vitting here after dinner! In solitary grandeur, with one hundred -two hundred-how many are there? -two nundred-now many are there--wax candles blinking at you! We only burn candles here; no gas al-lowed. Shall we put on the electric light, Julian? Lord, I think our poor uncle would turn in his grave! Come on! Music-room. Uncle hated music. But it's all there, piano-there's an organ in the gallery upstairs-harp, guitar, sackbut and psaltery. Oh, by, George, this will be in your way, won't it? Julian colored slightly. "I am sorworthy. My father never spoke of—old times." ry to say that he did not, Lord Fan-

"Ah, yes, yes, quite so!" assented Lord Fanworthy, quickly. "Great nuisance, family feuds! You have a look of the Mannerings, Mr. Shore. I think I should have known you as one of them, even if I had met you elsewhere."

The three men chatted as the horses span along the well-kept road, and after a short drive they reached Lord Fanworthy led the Grange. them into the drawing-room, calling "Em'ly!" as he went. said; and there was almost a maternal note in the low, clear voice; for Vane, as a lad, had been a favorite of hers, and, with the tact for which she was famous, she had often slipped in between his uncle and him and prevented a quarrel. "And it was good of you to come so quickly. And this is—" Vane introduced Julian, and she bowed and smiled gracious-ly. "And so you have come into your own, Vane? And it feels strange-

She nodded approvingly. "Quite right, Vane."

"But, see," he said; "it will be rather lonely for us two bachelors. Now, if you want to be as kind as you always used to be, you bring Lord Fanworthy to dine with us!

She did not hesitate a moment. "Yes," she said, smoothly.

The other two men came to the tea-table and her ladyship conversed with Julian. She asked no questions, but almost unconsciously he found himself telling her that he was unmarried, that he lived alone, that he had no profession and was content with a small income; indeed, nearly all the details which another person would only have extracted by a series of categorical questions; and he did not make the discovery until the two young men were going home in the landau.

Is it a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the womanly organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The local disorder and inflammantion of the delicate control of the seat mation of the delicate special organs of the sex should be treated steadily and systematically.

Dr. Pierce, during a long period of practice, found that a prescription made from medicinal extracts of native roots, without the use of alcohol, relieved over 90 per cent. of such cases. After using this remedy for many years in his private practice he put it up in form of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that would make it easily procurable, and it can be had at any store where medicines are handled.

Mrs. Lila B. Hawkins, of Zeus, Va., writes: "I had been failing in health for two years—most of the time was not able to attend to my household duties. Female weakness was my trouble and I was getting very bad but, thanks to Doctor Pierce's nedicines, I am well and strong again. I took only three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' and used the 'Lotion Tablets.' I have nothing but praise for Doctor Pierce's wonderful medicines."

Victoria Times-There are still some fields in which the mightest works of man's hands are petty when brought in contact with the fores of nature. The world has had another demons-tration of that fact. The lesson was costly, but it will prove profitable.

Winnipeg Free Press-Bilingualism has been making some stir in Ontario, but this is nothing to the storm that is coming in Manitoba. There is some reason to believe that the Minister of Education is beginning to realize the seriousness of the situation, but is restrained from adopting remedial measures by political considerations.

Saskatoon Phoenix-It is said that some 200,000 Canadians spent the Easter holidays in New York. Of course, there wasn't a good Conservative a-mongst them. It is inconceivable that a true loyal opponent of reciprocity would do anything in the way of business with New York.

Woodstock Sentinel Review — The kinship of Great Britain and the United States was shown by the exchange of messages of sympathy inspired by the Titanic disaster. They can show their kinship to better purpose by uniting and co-operating to make impossible a repetition of the Sydney (N. S.) Record - The development of the farm rests primarily on POOR OLD MOTHER.

In the correspondence column of a contemporary there recently appeared a question by a son-in-law whom his wife's mother had been living as to whether other members of the family (three sons), who were said to be able though unwilling, could be compelled to bear a portion of the ex-pense of the mother's maintance. She had been living with one of the sons, and the brother in-law had been asked if she could be boarded in his house so that the daughter might look after her. This was agreed to, but the board money was not paid, and after board money was not paid, and after eighteen months of squabbling the question was asked. The answer was dipiomatic, namely, that the matter was one which required most judicious handling, and that a solicitor should be consulted. Had the person in charge of the question column known of the Canadian Government Annuities System, the wisest thing he could have done would have been to recom-mend the purchase of a Government mend the purchase of a Government Annuity. At her age (75) an Annuiny of $300 ($75 every three months), payable as long as she might live, could have been purchased for $1992. The mother could have lived happily with her daughter for the remainder of her daughter the coup have would have the couple have would be remainded. days, the son-in-law would have regarded the mother's presence in the home as a boon rather than a burden, and the family ties would have remained unbroken. But best of all, the comfort and happiness of the dear mother, who had nursed them in their infancy, had, perhaps, spent many a sleepless night in anxious attendance them when the "Dread Messenger" was hovering near, ready to snatch away from her, and who had guided their young footsteps in the straight and narrow path—priceless service— would then have been assured for all time. Happily in Canada cases of this kind are few, and they will be still fewer in the years to come if the boys and girls of to-day can only be in-duced to pay into the Annuities System a few cents each week. For example, a young man of 20 by paying in 50 cents a week until he is 60 may purchase an Annuity of $352.76; and a young woman starting at the same age, and paying a like amount for the same period, could secure an Annuity of $311 72, which, owing to her longof $311 72, which, owing to ner long-evity being superior, is somewhat less than he would receive. The age of 60 to a young man or woman of 20 may seem a long way off; but it may interest them to know that, according to mortality experience, of 10,000 of either sex starting at 20 considerably more than 50% will be still living at 65. There is more than an even chance There is more than an even chance that you will be one of the 5,000.

Information as to the cost of an Annuity at any age may be secured on application to the Postmaster, or to the Superintendent of Annuities, Ottawa, to whom your letter may be sent without postage.

WHY OWN

Sydney (N. S.) Record—The development of the farm rests primarily on the people of the rural sections themselves rather than upon an influx of the city people, to most of whom success, if it eventually comes, will be acquired only by surmounting obstacles occasioned by lack of training and experience.

Victoria Colonist-It seems to be generally understood that Mr. Arthur Hawkes has found his usefulness gone. The trouble with Mr. Hawkes is that no one else knows anything but himself, and that is so unfortunate as to know "many things that are not true." The welfare of Canada will not suffer by the retirement of Mr. Hawkes from an "ungrateful" country's ser-

St. Thomas Journal—International legislation compelling steamship lines to adopt measures ensuring a fair degree of safety to passengers and crews is urgently and badly needed. It may have needed the supreme tragedy of the Titanic to awaken the world to a sense of its responsibilities towards those who risk their lives on the waves.

Ottawa Free Press-That triumph of human skill and cunning, the last cry in marine architecture, the steamer with both turbines and reciprocating engines and with safeguarding bulk-heads that close automatically to make her absolutely unsinkable—well, she is now where none but strange blind creatures dwell in the deep sea two miles down.

Brandon Sun-It is perhaps unfair as well as profitless to blame the steamship companies. Steamship companies must live. They cater to the demands of the pleasure loving public. Governments and public opinion have been careless and off their guard, ready to place unlimited confidence in mere bigness. They have now a bitter lesson to profit by.

Galt Reporter-Mr. Hays in no small degree was responsible for the enhanced reputation that came to Canada during his years with us. The tragedy of the Titanic robbed this country of a powerful human instrument in nationbuilding; but it left to history a record that Canada will remember with pride. illumined as that record is with an achievement that marks its author as one of the master minds of his day and generation.

Toronto Globe-Far more than half of Canada's foreign trade is with the United States. The imports from the United States are far greater than from all the world besides, and are increasing enormously every year. Has that trade made Canada an "adjunct" of the United States? Will we be more of an "adjunct" if we sell more freely to the United States as well as buy from them? Are Canadians loyal to the Empire when they buy United States products and disloyal only when they try to sell Canadian goods to United States customers?

Awaits Accurate Reports.

London, April 30.-Francis Dyke Acland, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, on behalf of the British Foreign Office, replying to a series of questions on the subject of the Titanic disaster, yesterday said:
"May I suggest that it is undesirable to make any more references to imperfect and possibly inaccurate reports of the proceedings of the committee of the United States Senate. The President of the Board of Trade is taking steps to obtain an authoritative report of the proceedings of the committee in case it may be of use in the enquiry here.

'No complaints have been received by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of the detention of British subjects. The committee has statutory powers to summon witnesses and no treaty or convention is required to give the United States jurisdiction over British subjects while they are on United States territory. The posi-tion appears to be that the Senate committee is within its rights in holding the enquiry and requiring the attendance of witnesses."

Women's Memorial to Heroes.

Washington, April 30 .- Mrs. W. H. Taft has given the first dollar to a Woman's Titanic Memorial, which it is proposed shall be erected in Washington, to commemorate the men who went down with the ship.

A committee of 100 women from all states has been named, and no contributions will be accepted from men. Mrs. John Hays Mrs. John Hammond and others are interested.

The Antonine Wall.

At the meeting of the Glasgow Archaeological Society the acting secretary reported that arrangements secretary reported that arrangements had been completed whereby two acres of land, lying to the couth of the cemetary at Bearsden and containing a very well preserved section of the Antonine Wall, had been placed under the Ancient Monuments Act, thus securing for all time the preservation of this valuable relic. As a result of representations made some time ago by the society, the parish council of New Kilpatrick had enclosed another part of the wall lying within the cemetary at Bearsden, and had opened the negotiations now completed regarding the more important portion lying on the property of Mr. Douglas, of Mains.

Moroccan Toilet Accessories. The native ladies of Morocco are very particular about the preservation of their complexions. They wash their faces in rosewater in which apricot kernels baked and powdered are introduced as an aid to preserve the natural tint of the complexion. Some ladies employ a wash which contains red radish scrapings powdered. They have also a peculiar method of removing superfluous hairs. A paste is made of lemon juice and sugar. This is applied and allowed to dry and then removed, taking, it is said, the hair with it. A hair preparation seems no less strange to Europeans. It is composed of aloe leaves, henna and reed grass. This is applied to the head, and when dry it is washed off with soap

"There go the happiest pair I ever met," remarked Vane, as the two men sat in their smoking jackets in the billiard roam.

"They seem devoted to each other," said Julian. "I suppose the man who said that marriages were made in Heaven must have had such a couple in his mind."

"Marriages are made in Heaven, but they smuggle a very fair coun-terfeit from quite another place," observed Vane, absently. "How is it you never married, Julian?" As the question left his lips he would have like to have checked it, for the subject was a sore one for him; but the question was asked, and he waited for the answer. for the answer.

Julian knocked the ash from the cigarette and fooked before him under his dropping lids.

"I don't know," he replied, as if he himself were wondering. "I suppose it is because I have never seen the woman I wanted to make my wife."

"You have never been in-love?" asked Vane, though he could have kicked himself for the banality of the thing.

"No," said Julian, after another pause. "No, I suppose not!"

Vane laughed grimly.

"You suppose not," he said. "You certainly have not, or you'd have known it. Bed? Right!"

Julian went to his room, but it. was some time before he went to bed. It was a moonlight night, and he leaned against the window and looked at the park, and the hills beyond. the land that represented to some small extent the vast wealth into which his cousin had come; looked at it with an expression in his eyes which, if she could have seen it, would have justified Lady Fanworthy's comparison.

But it was not the black panther asleep; or placidly satisfied and pur-There was a hungry, restless look in the dark eyes, and the white, even teeth gleamed as the lips closed and unclosed with a nervous movement.

They stayed three days at the Court, and during the whole of that time Vane treated Julian as the heir and "did him honor," as the significant old phrase has it; so that the servants, even Mr. Holland, came to regard Mr. Julian Shore as almost of equal importance to the earl himself.

Before they started to return to London, Julian gave orders for the cleaning and doing up of the Wizard's Room and, at Vane's suggestion, even instructed a mason to alter the fireplace.

They reached London just before tea-time, and Vane suddenly remembering his promise to Judith Orme,

"Engaged this afternoon, Julian?" Julian replied in the negative.

FINE TONIC FOR WOMEN,

"Well, then, come with me to call on a lady, will you?"

It would be as well, going to call on Judith, that should make the visit as conventional and void of significance as possible by taking a friend with him. A year ago the proposal of a tete-atete with Judith Orme would have set his heart beating; but now-There is safety in numbers, though it be only two.

"Who is it?" asked Julian.
"Miss Orme," replied Vane.

"The Miss Orme?"
Vane nodded. "The very Miss
Orme," he assented. You know her?"

"No; I have not even seen her," said Julian; "but, of course, I have heard of her; who hasn't?" "Wino, indeed?" said Vane, drily.

A neat maid-servant admitted them and took them upstairs.

Judith was seated at the piano, but at the sound of Vane's name-he not given Julian's-she rose quickly. But at sight of Julian she paused in her advance and the color of resentment rose to her beautiful face. It was there only for an instant, the next she came forward with outstretched hand, her sapphire eyes smiling, her lips half parted.

"We won't let you go all alone to that Madame Tussaud of a drawing-room, Lady Fanworthy," Vane said Vane said when the dessert was over. go into the music-room. Julian here is a tip-top performer, Send the coffee in there, please, will you, Prance? You won't mind our cigarettes, I know, Lady Fanworthy.

"Not if you give me one for myself," she said.

Vane led her, with a certain courtesy which he did not usually display, to the easiest of the chairs, and, when the cigarettes were smoked, took Julian by the arms and gently pushed him towards the piano.

"Sing us that thing you sang to me at your rooms, will you?" said; and he went and seated himself in a low chair beside Lady Fanworthy's, and with his arms folded behind his head listened with half closed eyes; he was back on the island again, be sure.

Julian sang three songs in response to Lord Fanworthy's eager murmur of admiration and delight and Vane's almost proprietorial "Go on Jul-

The light from the shaded candles fell full on the performer's dark face, and Lady Fanworthy watched it steadily.

"Julian's a regular nightingale, isn't he?" said Vane in a low voice. "Isn't it a fice voice?"

The old lady withdrew her eyes slowly.

"Yes," she said. "He is very good looking, and has a fine voice, and quite pretty manners. Did you ever see the black panther at the Zoo, Vane?"

Vane stared at her, then laughed. "The black panther when it is asleep, or has just been fed and is purring and licking itself."

Vane colored with momentary annoyance; then he laughed again.

"This is the first time I have ever known you to be-unjust and hard." he said in a low voice.

The brilliant eyes regarded him steadily, gravely.

"How do you know that I am-unjust and hard now?" she asked, with a slight imitation of his voice.

Vane moved with a gesture of impatience and deprecation.

"He's too good a fellow, is Julian, to be compared to a tiger," he said.

"Panther, I said," retorted Lady
Fanworthy, sweetly. "And a black one. Thank you so very much, Mr. Shore. You have a charming voice charming. Godfrey, we must not rob these young people of their beauty sleep; it is late."

TO THE FARMERS OF ONTARIO.

A Few Hints to Help Solve the Labor Question.

Dear Sir :- Realizing that one of the most urgent needs of the farmers of our Province is an adequate supply of farm labour, the Colonization Branch has been endeavouring to meet that demand by bringing men from Great Britain and Ireland and placing them with farmers in this Province, Dur-ing the past few years several thousand have been brought out and placed in this way. Instead, however, of the demand lessening, it seems to be in-creasing. Our observation and experience convince us that while there may be many explanations of this regretable fact, the one outstanding reason is the practice of employing men for six or eight months of the year and then turning them out to find situations elsewhere for the balance of their time. This works out in such a way that the men who have been employed on the farms now seem to gravitate to towns and cities in the winter months and remain there, with the result that the farmer is compelled to start over again the spring in his efforts to secure help.

Having regard to these facts, I beg to make the following suggestions, the adoption of which we are satisfied would go a long way towards relieving the stringency which exists at the present time:

1. First and foremost, arranged to employ a man by the year. We have found that the farmer who employs his help by the year, especially if he is able to supply a house and a small piece of land, is the farmer who has the least trouble over the helpless pro-blem. It is the better way for the man as well as for the farmer. If you feel your work does not warrant the employment of a man the year round, you might be well advised to consider the question of taking up a few more branches of farm work or handling additional live stock, and in this way we feel satisfied you would more than make up the extra cost of the help.

2. Do not be too exacting about getting an experienced man. Experienced farm labourers are rare at the present time, as there is a large demand for them in the Old Country as well as on this side. If you take an inexperienced man, recognizing that he is unfamiliar with the conditions and methods in this country, and devote a little attention to training him for a few months, you will find, in nine cases out of ten, that he will prove very useful to you. Being reas-onably generous in the matter of treatment and wages is essential if hired help is to be retained.

We beg to submit these suggestions to the farmers of the Province feeling satisfied that if they are acted upon, the results will redound to the personal advantage of the farmer as well as to the prosperity of the Pro-

Yours truly,

H. A. MAGDONELL, Director of Colonization, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

Zam-Buk Cured Her When so Bad She had to use Crutches.

For varicose sores, bad leg, or chronic ulcers Zam-Buk is without equal as a healer. A proof of this just to hand from Montreal. Mrs. T. Edwards, of 164 Amherst St., writes: "Some time ago a bad sore broke out on my left leg near the aukle. For a week or two I did not heed it, but it got so bad that I could hardly walk. I sent for our doctor, and he told me that I would have to lay up with the wound. I did so for three weeks. At the end of that time the ulcer healed a little, but I could only move about by using crutches.

"The sore then broke out badly, and he doctor told me that the only thing that would cure it would be an operation, and that I should have to lay up for a year. This, I knew, was impossible, as I had a family to attend to. "My son had cured a bad cut on his finger by using Zam-Buk, and he advised me to give this balm a trial. did so, and in less than a week's time it gave a wonderful relief, It stopped the pain, which had been so bad that many nights I did not get a wink of sleep. In a very short time the wound was so much better that I had no more sleepless nights, and was also able to move about and do my work, I persevered with Zam-Buk, with the result that the wound is now perfectly cured, and the limb is as sound and strong as ever. On Thursday morning, of last week, the fire bell rang and it was discover ed that T. Kenny's hall and stables were on fire. A large crowd soon gathered and it was only by quick work by the bucket brigade that the surrounding buildings were prevented from burning as it was almost surrounded by buildings: J. D Wagar's number shed and feed barns on the west, T. Kenny's house on the south and R. Cox's store and house on the east. Mr. Cox's house was only about twelve feet from the blaze so it took fire, but the flames were put out before they could make any headway. J. D. Wagar's feed barns and shed were also on fire but the blaze was soon extinguished.

A capital story is told of Lord Mor-ley, one of the King's four executives during His Majesty's absence in India. It refers to a time when he was addressing a meeting of his constituents in Montrose, a seat he held from 1896 to 1908, the date of his creation as a viscount.

At the close of his speech a heck-ler rose and said, "I wish to ask the right hon, gentleman an important question." The audience was all at-tention. "I wish to ask Mr. Morley

THE WITCH OF DAHLGREN

PROPRESENTATION OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERT

A Witch In Fancy, but Not In Fact

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The three traveling men drew closer around the hot stove in the parlor of the little hotel at Dahlgren, Pa. Benton, the cigar salesman, was continuing a conversation that had begun at the supper table a short while before.

"Gentlemen," he said impressively. "I know it sounds mighty fishy, but I actually did see what they call 'The Witch of Dahlgren!"

'When?" asked Cooper, the clothing drummer.

"On my last trip to this forlorn hole," was Benton's caustic reply.

"And that was?"-

"Last April. It's a short story. Want to hear about it?"

"Yes, go ahead," urged the third member of the group, Joel Gifford, who represented a great wholesale grocery house. He was a tall, good looking, quiet sort of man, well liked everywhere. There had been a tragedy in his life which many had guessed at, but few knew the real facts in the case.

Benton passed the cigars around and lighted one for himself.

"Now, gentlemen." he began, "please understand that I shall not feel in the least offended if you do not believe what I am about to tell you, but it really happened to me in this town. Last April I arrived here in the regular course of my travels and put up at this same hotel. I was the only guest that night, and after supper I got to talking with our host, whom you may have sized up to be just what he isa narrow minded country bumpkin."

"You're right," agreed Cooper promptly.

Joel Gifford smiled and shook his head. "I can't express an opinion, Benton, because I haven't seen the chap. This is the first time I've covered this territory."

"You haven't missed much in not making his acquaintance," growled Benton, continuing his narrative. "As I said. I fell into conversation with Linden and asked him a question that had been on the tip of my tongue for several hours-in fact, ever since I had heard a woman threatening her children with the wrath of the old witch 'You certainly on the crossroads. haven't got a witch in this commonplace town?' I asked him jokingly. "For a moment he was silent, and then he stroked his long black beard and muttered: 'We certainly have, Mr. Benton. The crossroads is a good place to keep away from.'

"'Why?' I demanded.

"'Because there is an old woman there who can work a charm or cast an evil spell over anybody. Man, I know it." And the old fellow got quite report, and the landlord of the Dahl-

a horse and a suggestion of dim white above that I was convinced must be the face and hair of the witch of Dahlgren. Beside her rode a black bulk that must have been another rider on a black horse, and for the instant I thought the witch must be riding with her master, the devil himself.

"I had to fall back in the bushes to save myself from being trampled upon, so furious was their dash into the road. They turned away from the village toward the open country and disappeared. Gentlemen, I was curious enough to remain there until their return an hour later, when a pale moon peeped from the drifting clouds.

"They were riding slowly now, and the woman was pleading with the other rider, a man. I could see her wringing her white hands, and her voice, a low, sweet contralto, did not sound like that of a deranged person. Her accents were cultivated, but the man spoke roughly in reply, and I heard her break into sobs as he hustled her toward the house and they disappeared beyond it. Later I heard the crashing of branches as if the horses were being led off through the woods back of the hut, and, now that I think of it, it must have been in the direction of this hotel."

Benton frowned as he opened the stove door and tossed in the end of his cigar. "I've often felt that I'd like to investigate the matter. You see, I had to leave early the next morning, and this is the first time I've struck this town since then, but my first question when I met a man I knew was, 'Is your witch still here?' And he said she was. There's a mystery in the matter, because"- Benton paused and stared thoughtfully at the toe of his polished boot.

"Because"- suggested Cooper impa-

"Because the voice of the black rider that night sounded mighty like the voice of mine host here, Bill Linden," returned Benton in a low tone.

Joel Gifford aroused himself from the half lounging position he had assumed when Benton began his narrative, and, although he had been a close listener to the story, his own thoughts must have made a sad running accompaniment to the tale, for his eyes were full of troubled reminiscence.

He lifted his eyes to the mantelpiece, where an old fashioned mirror hung in such a position that it reflected the door into the hall. Joel Gifford saw a picture framed in that doorway, and he half rose from his chair and pointed with a shaking finger at the face he saw in the glass.

It was the face of a tall, black bearded man, with a narrow head and little black eyes gleaming wickedly beneath bushy brows. He was staring at Joel Gifford as if fascinated by the younger man's face. There was ferocity in his gaze, as well as surprise and fear.

"Who is that man?" cried Joel Gifford excitedly as he whirled around toward the doorway.

"It's Bill Linden, our landlord!" cried Benton. And then he pulled Gifford violently aside, for there was the deafening report of a pistol, and the bullet that had been intended for Gifford found another mark and shattered the mirror. There was another

It is worn over a blouse of dotted net or shadow lace, which is either unlined or dropped over a slip of flesh pink chiffon cloth or china silk.

A new fashion notion is the use of a bona fide bath toweling for milady's promenade costumes. This toweling material has been dubbed agaric in Paris, and by this name it masquerades very successfully as a fashionable spring arrival, but it is toweling all the same, and the border effects in which it is used made the bathroom suggestion still more emphatic.

The circular drawers that are made in one are much liked by young girls and small women who have slender figures. This model is an excellent one, as it provides sufficient width at the lower edges to be pretty and comfortable, and it is smooth over the hips.

CHIC RIDING TO

Brewn Favored For Ac sories by Horsewon

"'Why?' I demanded.

"Because there is an old woman there who can work a charm or cast an evil spell over anybody. Man, I know it!" And the old fellow got quite excited.

"'You're joking, Bill Linden,' I laughed.

"He scowled like the villain that he must be from his looks. 'Mr. Benton, when I tell you that that woman has ruined my life you'll understand that I know what I'm talking about. She ought to have been hanged years ago—that's the way they did with the witches in the olden days. If I had my way she'd hang high now!' And he fell to muttering to himself and cursing.

"'Guess I'll go and have a look at her.' I said half jokingly.

"'You better not,' I was warned. 'She keeps a gun and winged Mason Smith when he got drunk one day and attacked her house. Just opened her window and took aim, and Mason went around with his arm in a sling for three months after that.'

"'Is she an old woman?' I asked.

"'Must be,' was the reply. 'Hair as white as snow.'

"'Where did she come from?' I inquired.

"'Nobody knows. Suddenly appeared in that little deserted house on the crossroads about five years ago. Never comes out in daytime, but I've seen hew face at the window, and some say that she rides at night on a snow white horse. I don't know whether to believe that or not."

"'You might as well believe the whole thing while you're about it, my friend,' I grinned at him, and I immediately went down to the crossroads and took a stroll along the lonely way that cut through dense woods. Why, they must be back of this hotel!"

Benton paused to relight his cigar and to marvel for a moment on the idea that had jest taken possession of him. Then he resumed: "About a mile down the road I saw a lonely little house-more of a cabin than a houseset back in the woods and overgrown to the very door with underbrush. Smoke curled from the chimney, and I was staring at the windows when all at once a face appeared at one of them. I could not see whether she was young or old, but the face was white as a sheet and on either side of it hung two heavy braids of snow white hair. The great dark eyes were turned toward me, and two arms were lifted either in supplication or malediction.

"For an instant I was rooted to the spot, and then I rubbed my eyes in wonderment, for suddenly she jerked backward, almost as if some one was behind her compelling her away from the window. She disappeared from view, and I walked on, quite convinced that the apparition I had seen was that of some crazed person. Nevertheless there was an air of mystery about the whole matter, and the village gossip concerning the so called witch determined me to stroll around there late in the evening. I did so near midnight and was rewarded by a strange sight.

"Just as I paused in front of the little house, which I could locate only by a glint of light from one curtained window, I heard the trampling of horses' hoofs and there broke from the tangled growth in front of the house a dim white shape that I knew to be the deafeeing report of a pistol, and the bullet that had been intended for Gifford found another mark and shattered the mirror. There was another report, and the landlord of the Dahlgren hotel dropped dead upon the floor, killed by his own wicked hand.

Gifford reached him first and turned him over and looked closely at the dead man's face. "He is dead." he said briefly, and then, rising, he continued to the little crowd of people that had gathered at the sound of the pistol shots: "Gentlemen, this man is not Bill Linden. That must be an assumed name, for he has been well known to the world as Chafield Chapman, a well known banker who disappeared five years ago and who was supposed to be dead. At the same time he disappeared my young wife. who was his only daughter, also disappeared from my house, and from a note that reached me a few days later I could only judge that both of them were dead. The note was signed by my father-in-law, and he said that as he had failed in business he would end all and that he would take Gertrude with him, My search for them both has covered five years, and it must end tonight, for I believe I have found the solution to the mystery.

"Chafield Chapman was passionately fond of his only child and always hated me because I loved and married her. It is my belief that he lured her away and has kept her prisoner in this hut in the woods back here, allowing her to ride forth only at night for air and exercise. Gentlemen, the witch of Dahlgren is my wife!"

Accompanied by a crowd of interested villagers, the three traveling men hastened to the house in the woods and broke open its barred door. There, facing them with beautiful white face frozen into fear and her grief whitened locks hanging in heavy braids over her shoulders, was Gertrude Gifford, Joel's lost bride.

At her scream of joyful recognition as her husband took her in his arms once more the people backed out of the house and left the reunited couple alone with their happiness.

Thus passed the witch of Dahlgren.

One Made the Selling of Their Land a Capital Crime.

In an old set of laws of the Choctaw Nation there is a clause which relates to the killing of witches. For witcheraft the penalty was death, and for alleging oneself to be a witch or for saying that any other person was one was punishable by sixty lashes on the bare back.

Another declared that no doctor could take money or any of the belongings of a patient he treated if the patient died. If the patient were raised up from a sickbed the doctor could accept what was offered to him, and if nothing was offered then he could take in goods what was his just compensation.

In 1834 the Choctaw council passed an act which made a person who bargained to sell any of the Choctaw land a traitor and punishable by death. Any white man who encouraged such action was deported. An Indian who sold or disposed of land either to individuals or to the United States in toto should be considered a traitor and shot on conviction. This was just preceding the beginning of the work of the Dawes commission.

itself and allowed partly to hang over the front of the collar.

This fashion seems to have come into vogue because of the well known fact that pearls, in order to keep their exquisite luster, should be worn next to the skin.

A very odd and dainty short negligee is made of latticed ribbons about an inch in width in lemon color. It is trimmed with ivory toned lace.

A richly embroidered Chinese kimono is in lemon colored silk crape.

Nightgowns made in what is known as chemise style, that are drawn over the head, are liked by many girls, but there is a great diversity of taste in the matter of underwear as in other departments of dress, and this design is very new.

When Cutting Striped Material.

One of the nost difficult things for the home dressmaker to accomplish is the proper cutting of striped materials. To be able to cut a striped dress well is a proof that you are by no means a novice at the art of dressmaking.

Shirts are always cut first. Lay the material out flat on the cutting table, and it there is no "up and down" to the material you will be able to fit the gores into each other, cutting the material in an economical way.

Remember to have the fine of small perforations found in the center of each gore of the pattern run straight with a stripe. This will cause each cut edge to be slightly bias and when joined will look far better than if a bias edge was joined to the straight.

The center of the front gore must, of course, be on a stripe. Double your material before cutting in order to have both sides exactly alike. When cutting sleeves be sure the material is doubled and save yourself the trouble of having one sleeve different from the other, thus ruining the garment.

Stripes should run straight from the shoulder to the waist in sleeves. Have the stripes run straight down the center of the front and straight down the center of the back when cutting the bodice. Always allow pieuty of material for seams when striped material is used and be sure that the stripes match to the joining of seams.

An example of ingenious craftsmanship in watchmaking is shown in the accompanying illustrations of a watch contained in a pearl, the illustrations showing about its actual size. It took Afteen months of the time of the best workmen employed by a French jewelry firm to complete it. The pearl in its native state weighed forty-five grains and measured 0.57 of an inch in diameter. The movement, which is 0.45 of an inch in diameter, is of special construction, of course, and represents the most patient and minute care. The piercing of the pearl, for instance, was exceptionally difficult. The watch is valued at $6,000 .-Popular Mechanics.

The Game of Cherry.

If you intend having a few of your friends at your house on the afternoon of Washington's birthday send out your invitations on cardboard cut in the shape of a little hatchet. In one corner paint a little cherry tree and then write your invitation. Some fun can be had if, after your guests arrive, you play the game of "cherry." Buy a candy basket and fill it with candy cherries. Suspend the basket from the ceiling by a long string and let your guests, with hands tied behind them, try to catch the swinging basket with their mouths. The successful one gets the basket of cherries as a prize. Another form of this game is to hang the individual cherries from strings and allow the children to try to catch them in their mouths. Still another "cherry" gameis to place a box on a chair at each end of the room and give each child a half dozen candy cherries, which he, at a distance, tries to throw in the basket

Washington and the Poacher.

Washington was a fine shot, and the waters of the Chesapeake abounded in canvasback and other ducks. Washington would not allow other people to bring down his birds. He learned that one poacher was filling his game bags at his expense. Washington determined to end his fun. Hearing a shot one day, he mounted his horse and rode in the direction of the sound. The poacher discovered his approach and, entering his canoe, pushed a few yards out into the river before the master of Mount Vernon came in view. When Washington, with anger in his eye. came in sight the poacher raised his gun, cocked it and took deliberate aim. Washington did not show the slightest fear. He walked into the water, seized the canoe and pulled it ashore. Taking the gun from the poacher, he gave him so severe a chastisement that he never again repeated his attempt upon Washington's birds.

Hotelkeeper Farr Implicates Banker and Official.

Goderich, April 30.-That William Patterson, chairman of the Centre Huron License Board, offered to guarantee, if given $500, that the license of the Union Hotel, conducted by Michael Farr, would not be cut off when the prescribed reduction of licenses was carried out, was the accusation made by Farr at yesterday's opening sitting of the court of enquiry, presided over by Eudo Saunders.

Farr also swore that License Inspector Asquith had given him the impression that he would do well to accept the terms named by Patterson.

L. E. Dancey, counsel for Patterson, endeavored to get an adjournment until to-day, as he had not seen the declaration made by Farr to the Provincial License Department, but the commissioner said that he intended proceeding.

Farr swore that he had first been approached by another party, who in-timated that his license might be saved. About a week and a half after the reduction bylaw passed, Patterson and the other party came to his hotel. He told Patterson he spent $4,000 on his hotel, and asked Patterson to spare the axe so far as he was con-cerned. Patterson replied that there were two to be cut off, and said that he had worked over in Hullet against local option, and that he did not purpose doing anything for nothing.

Farr finally said that the man who first approached him was Andrew Porter, local manager of the Sterling Bank, who had told him his license was in danger. Porter had said he had influence with the commissioners. On Feb. 29, or March 8, Porter phoned him that the license com-Millers Charge Railways With an Unfair Discrimination.

Toronto, April 30.-Complaints made by the Dominion Millers' Association regarding delay in the shipment and transportation of grain eastward from Port Arthur and Fort William caused a lively discussion at the session of the Dominion Railway Board yesterday afternoon.

C. B. Watts, secretary of the Dominion Millers' Association, presented the case from the millers' standpoint, while the C.P.R. was represented by E. W. Beatty, their solicitor, and the C.N.R. by George Shaw general traffic manager.

Mr. Watts claimed three things in particular. One was that the railways showed discrimination in favor of the export trade in shipping grain east-ward from Port Arthur and Fort William. The grain destined to St. John, N.B., or Halifax, got the preference as regards speed in shipment and transportation, over the grain destined to points in eastern Canada. Another point claimed by Mr. Watts is that the different railway companies show discrimination by giving first shipping to the grain from the terminal elevators that has been brought there over their own lines. Mr Watts' third complaint was that all the railways lack the facilities for handling the traffic. These three matters regarding grain shipments eastward have been complained of by the Dominion Millers' Association since 1905, and they have not yet been settled.

The hearing was adjourned until to-day.

A number of cases were left over till next week when the commission meets again at Ottawa.

Constantinople, April 30 .- The great bazaar quarters in Damascus have been destroyed by fire. Several persons were killed and many injured, an I the damage is estimated at $10,000,000.

The fire began at midnight Friday, and lasted until late Saturday night.

Damascus is one of the holy cities of the Mohammedans; capital of the vilayet of Syria, and is noted among other things for its numerous bazaars.

These are designated by the name of some particular trade or community. The bazaar quarters comprise long streets covered in with high woodwork and lined with shops, stalls, warehouses and cafes. The Greek bazaar, one of the largest, was rebuilt after its destruction by fire in 1893.

In the midst of the bazaar stands the house of Asad Pasha, one of the handsomest in Damascus. There are many miles of these bazaars, all of which are luxuriously fitted up.

Louis Porter Victim of Unknown Assassin Near Minden.

Cold-Blooded Crime Is Brought to Light When Body of Man Is Found In Bushes, 150 Yards From Spot Where He Was Shot Down-Rifle Which He Carried Cannot Be Found-Ellis Heard Report.

Lindsay, April 30.—Discovery of the body of Louis Porter, lying concealed in dense bushes beside the road, six miles from Minden, about 22 miles from here, on Sunday morning, has brought to light clear evidence of a cold-blooded murder.

Porter had been shot through the arm and body, causing gaping wounds. A pool of blood on the road indicated where the shooting had cccurred. The body had been dragged a distance of about 150 yards, into the woods in an evident effort by the murderer or murderers at concealment.

The fact that a gun carried by Porter cannot be found, makes it appear that he may have been shot with his own weapon after a struggle.

Porter, who was a farmer, 35 years of age, left his father's home with a forty-four calibre rifle and two cartridges on Thursday evening about 7 o'clock to look at some traps. When he did not return that night his father decided he had gone to his own home. Saturday morning there being no word from him his father drove to his home and found his wife very uneasy about him. A search party was organized among the neighbors and on Sunday afternoon the body was found. A number of blood stains on the road indicated where the shooting had taken place.

Porter was last seen by a man named Ellis, who states that he saw him passing his door, and later on heard a gun report. Though Porter was carrying a gun it cannot now be found. Two Toronto detectives have been sent to the scene of the shooting. An inquest was opened yesterday, and adjourned until Friday.

that some overpowering worry put the girl into a state of distraction which caused the act. The letter received doubtless was the cause of the trouble. Just what epistle is referred to is a matter which will, it is thought, be cleared up at the inquest on Thursday night.

It was largely through the untiring efforts of Fire Chief Lewis that the recovery of the body was made just Developments are promised at the inquest Thursday night. Friends of the girl, members of the family and others are being summoned. Samuel Gibson, father of the dead girl, is determined on the fullest enquiries possible.

Rather a change from the usual order of things is a fichu of velvet, cut with care to avoid a heavy appearance, over a form of pale ninon, the coloring being straw and heliotrope.

Another fichu is of extremely heavy old venetian point, tinted a grayish shade over aluminium tissue, with silvered fringe to finish it.

A new and fetching idea for a collar is a piece of black velvet ribbon about three inches wide, twisted around the top of a standing collar and tied in a small bow at the back or slightly at one side, with long ends reaching almost to the waist line. These are worn with suits and simple cloth gowns.

Many of the newest side jabots are really not frills at all, but consist of a triangular piece of lace, suggestive of revers. Among other successful novelties in this line are those having the large revers on one side of a central strip of insertion, while the other edge is finished with a frill of matching lace.

The child's dress that is closed at the front is both a smart and a practical one. It is easy for the little wearer to slip on and off, and it is the height of style. The dress seen in the cut includes an unusually attractive collar and can be made from a variety of materials. JUDIO CHOLLET.

We are asked to announce that the Salvation Army's annual week of self denial will take place from May 7th to 13th. The army has a claim upon all thinking men and women, for it must be remembered that while they are asking the public to help them, they freely give themselves up to works of mercy and self-denial, and are indeed an example to many in this respect. The local corps is making preparations for a great effort. They are hoping by personal self denial, as well as collecting from others, to raise a larger sum than ever, and we wish them success. We hope our readers will render what help they can, when the Capt. or her assistants wait upon them for contributions. denial will take place from May 7th them for contributions.

The Royal Hotel, long regarded as Picton's foremost hostelry, has been refused a license. B. R. Hepburn, M. P., one of the owners, is in Toronto in an endeavor to adjust matters. The Royal management a week or ten days ago commenced improvements, which were estimated to cost $5,000, and these are well under the way. The and these are well under the way. The owners say they will turn the lock on the door by May 15 if the license is not renewed. The Globe and Queen's Hotels have been given two months in which to carry out orders from the Provincial Inspector. The Quinte Hotel license has been renewed. as well as the shop license of Caleb Williams. The Tecumseth has been extended one month to allow the proprietor, Manly Martin, to dispose of the business. The Picton Hotel has been given two months to wind up the business.

Kingston Liquor Commissioners met, Monday afternoon, and in accordance with the wish of the ratepayers, expressed last January at the polls, issued only fifteen tavern licenses instead of twenty-five as formerly. An appeal of the hotelmen against the decision of Judge Teetzel with regard to the validity of the by-law, in view to the validity of the by-law, in view of alleged duplicate voting. has yet to be heard by the Divisional Court at Toronto, but it is not expected the hotelmen have any chance. These tavern licenses were granted: G. T. R. Restaurant. Lakeview Hotel, Ottaws House, Randolph, Queen's, Whitney, Anglo-American. Iroquois, Maple Leaf, Albion, Windsor and British-American. The licenses of the Hall and Provinctal were extended for two months in order to give the protwo months in order to give the proprietors a chance to secure more suitable premises. The application of the Frontenac proprietor, W. Telfer, was laid over, and this has caused some surprise, because the Frontenac is the best fitted up hotel in Kingston. The Market Square, which ten years ago was surrounded by nine bars will now have to do with two.

Brisco Opera House.

No play that has been offered in recent years presents so many good points for the pleasure of the theatre goers as does "The Man on The Box," for it combines comedy, farce, sent-iment, emotion, and has also a thread of real melo-drama, all of which, deftby intermingled by the cunning hand of the dramatist, make up a play of absorbing interest. This attraction will appear at the Brisco Opera House on Wednesday evening, May 8th.

Married at Camden East.

A pretty wedding took place in St. Luke's church, on Wednesday, 24th inst., when Edward Hamilton was married to Miss Lena Maude Robinson, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Robinson. Bethel street. The church looked bright and cheerful with the many choice and tastefully arranged flowers and plants, and there was a full attendance of the vested choir, of which both bride and groom are devoted members, the service being fully choral. While the hymn, "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden," was sung. the bride elect charmingly attired in a dress of silk marquisette over silk taffeta and pearl trimmings, and was leaning on her brother's arm, who, in the unavoidable absence of her father through indisposition, gave her away, took her place at the chancel step, where the marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. R. W. Spencer, rector of the parish. After the signing of the registrars in the vestry—during which the hymn, "O Father All Creating" was sung—an adjournment was made to the bride's home, where a recherche wedding-breakfast was served. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsoms gold watch and chain.

Dr. Needler's Lecture.

On Friday night, April 26th, in Historical Hall, Dr. G. H. Neddler of the University of Toronto, delivered before the Historicai Society a lecture on "Education in Germany and Ontario." The lecture was intended to contrast the difference in the systems of the two countries, principally as regards the course followed by each country in regard to the primary each country in regard to the primary and high schools. Dr. Needler startand high schools, Dr. Needer started by giving a short historical sketch of the development of education from the early ages, its gradual changes and the final big change which took place at the time of Martin Luther. After explaining carefully how Germany had provided schools that were doing excellent work because of the system which had been introduced, he told wherein the Ontario system varied from the German. His conclusions in regard to this subject, which he admitted were open to controversy, he thought showed the German plan to be the wiser one to follow. In closing his lecture he told of the German Un-iversity and explained the system very carefully, particularly with reference to the position occupied by the professors and the lectures given by then. Dr. Needler explained that he feared that the lecture was more adapted for a body of teachers than for a mixed audience, but the most of those present were able to carry away thoughts that will help to make them better understand some of the needs of the Ontario system. The President of the Local Society thanked Dr. Needler for again favoring the people of Napanee by coming here to lecture and explained how much such a lecture meant to people who are not living in a University town where it is easy to hear a good lecture at any time- The next meeting of the Society was then announced for Friday evening, May 10th, A no-tice of it appears elsewhere in this paper. The meeting closed at 9,30 p. m. with "God Save the King."
